

HEARING IS MAGIC.

Big events are loud. Fast games, crowded halls, side conversations, judge calls, and pairings can all make communication harder. For players with hearing loss, that can affect confidence, connection, and the ability to fully enjoy the game.

Inclusive play starts with simple habits. Face your opponent when you speak. Keep your voice clear. Repeat life totals and key game actions. Confirm triggers, combat, and judge calls. Reduce side chatter when possible. Ask what helps, then communicate with patience and respect.

Good communication makes the game better for everyone.

Be the player who makes the table more inclusive.

Speak clearly. Confirm important information. Make room for every player to belong.
